Note: All of us are concerned about how SARS-CoV 2 and COVID-19 will affect our lives and work. My wife and I are at risk as are most of those reading this. I worry about all of the people who support the production of SafetyLit and the population at large.

Large areas of the world are under quarantine or under social distancing orders. While this control measure is inconvenient or annoying it presents an opportunity for injury surveillance and research. I have viewed traffic cameras in southern California and there is a profound reduction in the number of vehicles on the roads. Sidewalks have emptied of pedestrians. Will this lead to a reduction of traffic-related injuries? Maybe not because I have also noticed that there is a marked increase in vehicle drivers moving at a very, very high rate of speed on open expressways. Anecdotally, there are reports of increased red-light running. Limits have been placed on sports and recreation activities. Will this affect injuries? Families who are usually apart for large parts of the day are now forced into the confines of their homes. Might this affect the occurrence of intimate partner and other family violence? How will these affiliation restrictions affect the behavior of alcohol and other drug users? Will law enforcement and healthcare personnel be at increased risk of injuries from violence? As hospitals begin to fill with people with pneumonia, will triage protocols move injured patients back in the line for treatment as intensive care bed availability is diminished? While recreational activity restrictions and social distancing measures are in place we might expect fewer people to experience serious injuries and thus see a reduction of fatalities. Will hospital overcrowding lead to delays in care – delays that might increase the risk of death and disabilities among moderately injured patients?
