SafetyLit is now on a new web host and should be stable for at least a few months. There is still much work to be done to get our website software fully updated. However, the good news is that SafetyLit will survive beyond June. During the past 3 weeks I've maintained the website in two locations because the transition to the new host was necessarily performed in multiple steps. Thus, that doubled effort led to a backlog – some new articles have yet to be edited and posted. All delayed articles will be posted next week. During this time I found 38 journals that are publishing injury-related content and those have been added to this current and to the previous Weekly Update.

There is still a possibility of interruptions to your access to the website but those should last only a few moments instead of the hours-long gaps that the site experienced over the past 10 days.
